The Roman Republican Die Project (RRDP) will bring leading scholars together at a conference hosted by the American Academy in Rome from 9–11 April 2025. At Coins, Counting, and Community — Exploring Deep Data from the Roman Republican Die Project, a group of international historians, archaeologists, and numismatists will present original research on specific Roman Republican issues utilizing the data provided by RRDP.

The conference at the American Academy in Rome expands the scope of the project, which has in previous phases focused on control-marked coinage and issues from the period 95–75 BCE and showcases potential methods of using RRDP for other scholarly research.

RRDP is grateful for the funding of The Aretê Foundation to support the conference.
